WORKSHOP BACKGROUND

Business Continuity Planning (BCP) is more than predetermining scenario assumptions as to how to recovery from a disaster or other unforeseen disruptions to normal business operations. BCP is the precursor to Business Continuity Management (BCM) which is about prevention of loss, and preparing for disruptive incidents that may impair an organization's functionality, or even causing business decimation. BCM also looks beyond mitigating impact to considerations for resilience and recovery. Disruptions could include staff being unable to turn-up for work due to travel difficulties or closures in school/childcare and business meetings being cancelled. At worst, disruptions such as a pandemic (Covid-19) may force or necessitate the shutdown of an entire country. Irrespective of the disruption, a well thought through and designed Business Continuity Plan can help all businesses when faced with disruptions of any nature. More importantly, Business Continuity Planning and Management seeks to mitigate and minimize losses that may result from a disruptive or destructive business incident.
